State still looking for champion of gay marriage

- Pennsylvania lags well behind other states when it comes to LGBT's biggest civil rights effort
- New proposal out of Harrisburg would actually strengthen rights afforded traditional marriage

LGBT party with lament

Thousands enjoyed 23rd annual PrideDay, but civil rights fight still on their minds Pa. lawmakers remain behind other states on gay marriage

President Barack Obama last month came out in support of same sex marriage in a move that was lauded by LGBT advocates across the country.

But that doesn't change anything for those like Mike Iezzi of Philadelphia, who is soon retiring and was recently denied Social Security benefits for his same sex partner of 35 years. "I don't care about whether you call it a 'bond' or a 'union,' I want equal rights," he said yesterday at Philly Pride's 23rd annual PrideDay. "I think we're coming close, but we need people to really act up so we can get them faster."

"We're the only class that is not protected," said Allentown resident Rick Stahley. "You can legally not sell us a house. We can't make medical decisions for our loved ones. We just want what everyone else has, nothing more and nothing less."

Although PrideDay has evolved from its humble beginnings as an impromptu march in the late 1980s to a celebration that, according to organizers, draws more than 25,000 participants each year, state lawmakers have not.

In fact, Harrisburg's latest legislative development was actually an amendment to the Pennsylvania Constitution proposed last year by Republican state Rep. Daryl Metcalfe that would further restrict the definition of marriage, potentially terminating the right of any local government to offer domestic partnership benefits to employees.

A House committee delayed voting on the bill in March, but it drew 36 co-sponsors, representing what many political watchdog groups said was a significant step backward for the state's equality movement.

The environment is considerably friendlier in Philadelphia, with the city is now one of six municipalities in the state that extends some form of domestic partnership benefits to employees.

"It's cool to have a president that supports gay marriage because, if nothing else, it will eventually move our country forward," said Vaughn Lloyd. "Hopefully, it will spread closer to home."

▶ PrideDay revelers said they are disappointed with Pennsylvania lawmakers unwilling to muster any movement on gay marriage legislation.

Impromptu march to massive party

PrideDay's first parade was held in 1989, when a couple hundred participants staged an impromptu march to coincide with a rally held at Love Park by the now-defunct Lesbian and Gay Task Force.

The successful event inspired community members to form a nonprofit with the goal of putting on an annual LGBT parade and festival at Penn's Landing. The organization evolved into Philly Pride Presents and the parade, organizers say, is now the region's largest.

This year's PrideDay began at 13th and Locust streets, weaving its way through the area affectionately dubbed the Gayborhood.

Talk show host Wendy Williams headlined.

"Hopefully [Obama's endorsement of same sex marriage] will have an effect on the state, though the Republican governors in Pennsylvania and in New Jersey are both against it and have both been outspoken about it. I think it's great Obama came out in support of it, but it has been disappointing to have to wait that much longer." STAN GORECKI OF NEW JERSEY

Courts overhauled by 'enthusiastic' leaders

PHILADELPHIA. The once-bungled city court system has undergone a major overhaul that has recovered millions in city cash and rejuvenated a muddled tangle of court documents at the Criminal Justice Center by installing advanced digital programs, officials told the Inquirer.

The new bureaucracy that replaced the old-of-date, dysfunctional elected Court of Quarter Sessions office last year said the extremely busy court system is "very enthusiastic" with the new reforms, including the digital program that makes civil court cases much more accessible, the Inquirer reported. The massive criminal court system is also expected to enter the digital program soon. METRO

SEPTA seeking charitable riders to donate to its food drive Increase in demand yet again at Philabundance

RICARD LARMA/METRO

SEPTA's Philabundance food drive enters its second week today.

Toan Tran, 45, and his two children have faced many challenges. His 10-year-old son has been diagnosed with ADHD and autism, and Tran recently regained custody of both of them from the city Department of Human Services.

But one of his greatest challenges has been keeping food on the table while being unemployed. The difficulty forced him to turn to the Salvation Army, one of nearly 500 agencies that distribute food from Philabundance, the region's largest hunger-relief organization.

"With that food, I don't have to worry about running out of food. That help me out a lot." TRAN

Additional city school-age children who were eligible safe summer program, but did not receive the meals.

"With that food, I don't have to worry about running out of food. That help me out a lot," the North Philadelphia resident said in broken English. "It really does help big time."

Philabundance has seen a 26 percent increase in the number of people receiving food from its agencies in the past year, yet the organization is concerned about families whose children receive free or reduced school lunch and how they will provide during the summer.

The group estimates that for a household with two children two extra meals a day translates to about 40 extra meals per month, which could mean another $110 to $125 per month.

"When you're having a hard time meeting your bills and paying utilities, it can be devastating," said Marlo DelSordo, spokeswoman for Philabundance.

SEPTA is doing its fourth annual food drive for Philabundance. Last year the transit agency collected nearly 18 tons of food, which provided about 38,000 meals.

Every other month, Tran gets an assortment of canned goods and meat from the Philabundance program, which he said gives him more time to focus on his children than worrying about where their next meal will come from.

"These people here they really sit down and spend a couple minutes, understand my situation and what I go through," he said. "I feel good. If I could I would go out there every week."

Man tortured, dog slain during home invasions

Police are investigating four violent home invasions in the past two days that left one man badly beaten and burned and a dog dead from a gunshot wound.

In the last incident, three men broke into a house on Friendship Street of Northeast Philadelphia yesterday and made away with tens of thousands of dollars.

Police said that a man and a woman, both 21, were sleeping together in the front bedroom of the home when they were awoken around 3:30 a.m. by three armed intruders breaking into a side window.

The men demanded money and began tying up the couple with plastic tape. As the gunman bound the male victim, he pistol-whipped him in the head and caused the gun to go off, shooting through the ceiling. The men then ransacked the residence. They took $10,000 from a dresser.

▶ Rash of violent break-ins.

Earlier yesterday, another young couple told police three or four men barged into their Mayfair home. Nothing was taken, but the gunman shot the homeowners' dog in the right eye before fleeing. The animal was rushed to the vet, but had to be put to sleep.

In a first incident of the weekend, five masked men armed with handguns forced a Tacony man, 33, into his home on Longshore Avenue shortly after 4 a.m. Saturday. That residence is a mile away from the house targeted in the Mayfair home invasion.

They made away with a watch, ring, bracelet, a wallet containing IDs and credit cards and $600. The victim told police that the incident happened quickly and he didn't know why he was targeted.

Less than a half hour later, a couple were returning home on West Wingohocking Street in Logan.

The gunmen took more than $1,000 in cash then forced the husband into the basement, where they beat him with a club and threw hot water onto his back. After the invaders were unable to get the man to tell them where they could find more valuables, they left.

No arrests have been made in any of the invasions.

Key to Sandusky trial: Who do you believe?

PATRICK SMITH/GETTY IMAGES

Opening arguments in the child sex abuse trial of former Penn State University assistant football coach Jerry Sandusky start today, with the explosive case expected to center on the credibility of witnesses.

Eight young men are prepared to testify in Centre County Court about how Sandusky, 68, befriended and then sexually abused them as boys over a 15-year period. The men, now aged 18 to 28, will be identified publicly for the first time in court.

Sandusky, a former defensive coordinator for Pennsylvania State University, faces 52 counts of sexual abuse against 10 boys. If convicted he could be sentenced to more than 500 years in prison.

Victor Vieth, executive director of the National Child Protection Training Center, said Sandusky's attorney, Joe Amendola, would try to attack the accusers' believability but would face a tough task.

Quoted

"This is not a fun day for them. Who wants to talk about having anal intercourse with a much older man?"
VIETH

The long gap between the alleged abuse and reporting it "only adds to their credibility," said Vieth, a former Minnesota prosecutor. Five had sought unsuccessfully to testify under pseudonyms, "and I think that will come across to the jurors," he said.

Sandusky has laid out a potential defense, saying in an NBC television interview in November that he engaged in horseplay with alleged victims but stopped short of sexual intercourse or penetration.

Amendola, his attorney, has said one of his tactics will be to "destroy" the credibility of former graduate assistant Mike McQueary and thus raise questions about all the witnesses and victims.

A jury of seven women and five men, all white, were picked last week. Eight of them have ties to Penn State, the largest employer in the area of small towns and farms. REUTERS

Case's impact felt across community

BELLEFONTE, PA. Prosecutors allege Jerry Sandusky had physical contact with the boys, known in court documents as Victims 1 to 10, that ranged from tickling and a "soap battle" in Penn State showers to oral and anal sex.

The abuse charges shook the university and prompted the firing of revered football coach Joe Paterno and university President Graham Spanier in November 2011.

The allegations brought an ignominious end to the career of Paterno, who recorded more wins in major college football than any other coach. He died of lung cancer in January, about two months after being fired. His widow Sue and son Jay may be called as witnesses for Sandusky.

The charges also marked a watershed in awareness of child sexual abuse since Sandusky seemed an unlikely predator. REUTERS

Adult testimony changes things

BELLEFONTE, PA. Victor Vieth of the NCPTC said the Sandusky trial differed from most sexual abuse cases because the accusers were young men, not children. Most cases also involve only one victim, not 10 as in Sandusky's case.

"It's hard to undermine the credibility of eight or nine adult men," he said.

Sandusky is accused of using the Second Mile, a charity he founded in 1977, to prey on needy young boys. The charity said last month it was closing because contributions had dried up. REUTERS

Auburn footballers shot dead at party

Two former Auburn University football players and another man were shot dead and three people including a current player were wounded when an argument at a pool party at an off-campus apartment complex escalated, police said yesterday.

Two of those shot to death, Edward Christian and Ladarious Phillips, both 20, played for Auburn previously. A current member of the team, Eric Mack, also 20, was wounded and admitted to East Alabama Medical Center. His condition was not released.

The third fatality was Demario Pitts, 20, police said.

Auburn Police Chief Tommy Dawson identified the suspect as 22-year-old Desmonte Leonard of Montgomery, Alabama's capital, and said he was being sought on three counts of capital murder.

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Phillips

Leonard fled the scene in a white Chevrolet Caprice with two other men, who were considered "persons of interest," Dawson said, declining to identify them. The vehicle was found abandoned in nearby Macon County.

U.S. Marshals and the FBI were aiding the investigation, Dawson told a news conference.

Police received a call reporting shots fired at 10:03 p.m. Saturday and Christian was pronounced dead at the scene. The other two men fatally shot died at the hospital.

A fifth victim was treated and released. The sixth was airlifted to the University of Alabama-Birmingham Hospital with a gunshot wound to the head, Dawson said. He was in critical condition yesterday.

"This is a tragic day for the Auburn family," Mayor Bill Ham Jr. said. "It's just beyond my capacity to understand. It's senseless."

Lee County Sheriff Jay Jones said the county, which includes Auburn, typically suffers annual homicides "in the single digits."

"This is pretty much unprecedented," Jones said.

News in brief

No N. Korean nuke test 'at present'

NORTH KOREA. North Korea said it isn't planning to test a nuclear weapon "at present," releasing the denial on the day a U.S. envoy arrived in South Korea to discuss tensions on the Korean peninsula.

South Korea "seeks to rattle the nerves of the DPRK in a bid to cause it to conduct a nuclear test, though such a thing is not under plan at present," an unidentified Foreign Ministry spokesman said in a statement carried Saturday by the official Korean Central News Agency. DPRK refers to North Korea's official name, the Democratic People's Republic of Korea.

South Korea has no comment to make on the KCNA statement, the Unification Ministry's spokesman, Kim Hyung Suk, said yesterday. North Korea needs to "show its sincerity through dialogue and positive actions, not provocations," he said. BLOOMBERG

McDonald's sales drop in Asia

CHINA. Chinese consumers may be losing their appetite for American fast food.

On Friday, McDonald's Corp. reported that same-store sales fell 1.7 percent in Asia Pacific, the Middle East and Africa in May, the biggest decline since at least 2004.

The pullback at the world's largest restaurant chain coincides with a slowing Chinese economy. That has forced McDonald's and Yum! Brands Inc., which runs the KFC and Pizza Hut chains, to fight back with less-expensive menu items, said Steve West, an analyst at ITG Investment Research in St. Louis.

"We've seen a lot of deep discounting by McDonald's and Yum," he said. "McDonald's has been talking about keeping that up in the face of pretty high inflation." BLOOMBERG

Lindsay Lohan's car crash still happening

Lindsay Lohan got into a nasty car accident in L.A. during the weekend, and because this is Lindsay Lohan, things are far from over.

The actress, who was driving, initially claimed that an 18-wheeler cut off her black Porsche, causing her to slam into the back of it and total her car.

We're not sure if the photos of the damage match up to this story — we're not even sure we've ever seen a car this expensive before — but the driver of the truck tells TMZ that Lohan, who was speeding, caused the crash, then attempted to leave the scene while her assistants negotiated a bribe and removed her belongings from the car. "I'd already called 911 because they were trying to get away from the scene," the truck driver tells the site. "But they packed a bag and then the [assistant] told me, 'Don't mention the bag to the cops.'"

Lindsay, for her part, is sticking with her original story, but yesterday also floated the idea that the brakes on the Porsche, which was a rental, were recently replaced and failed.

Lindsay, we realize you did not have a normal adolescence, so allow us to explain how this works: When you irresponsibly smash up an expensive car that isn't yours, the correct response is to cry, call your mom and say "officer" a lot. Rinse and repeat as necessary.

Something we haven't seen, please

Madonna has never been one to put on a PG show. But her Thursday night concert in Istanbul made rolling around moaning in a wedding dress look subtle.

While performing her song "Human Nature," the 53-year-old — wearing some combination of fishnets and upscale suburban mall bondage — decided that fondling herself wasn't quite enough. At the end of perhaps the world's most choreographed, awkward striptease, the singer flashed the audience of 55,000 her right nipple before ending the song with her hand down her pants.

Is she still sexy? Of course. But she's now officially in the creepy aunt subsection.

Warning: Nude Snooki is lurking out there

"Jersey Shore" star Snooki seems to be the latest celebrity to get her phone hacked and, surprise, there were nude photos on there.

The pictures, which were first posted to the blog Egotastic, show her — or, if we're entertaining a really dark world, an impersonator — in a hotel room and appear to be at least six months old.

We can't decide what's more upsetting: That we've seen Snooki naked, or that we can estimate how long ago she was naked.

Talking points

McConaughey wedding ends with camping trip

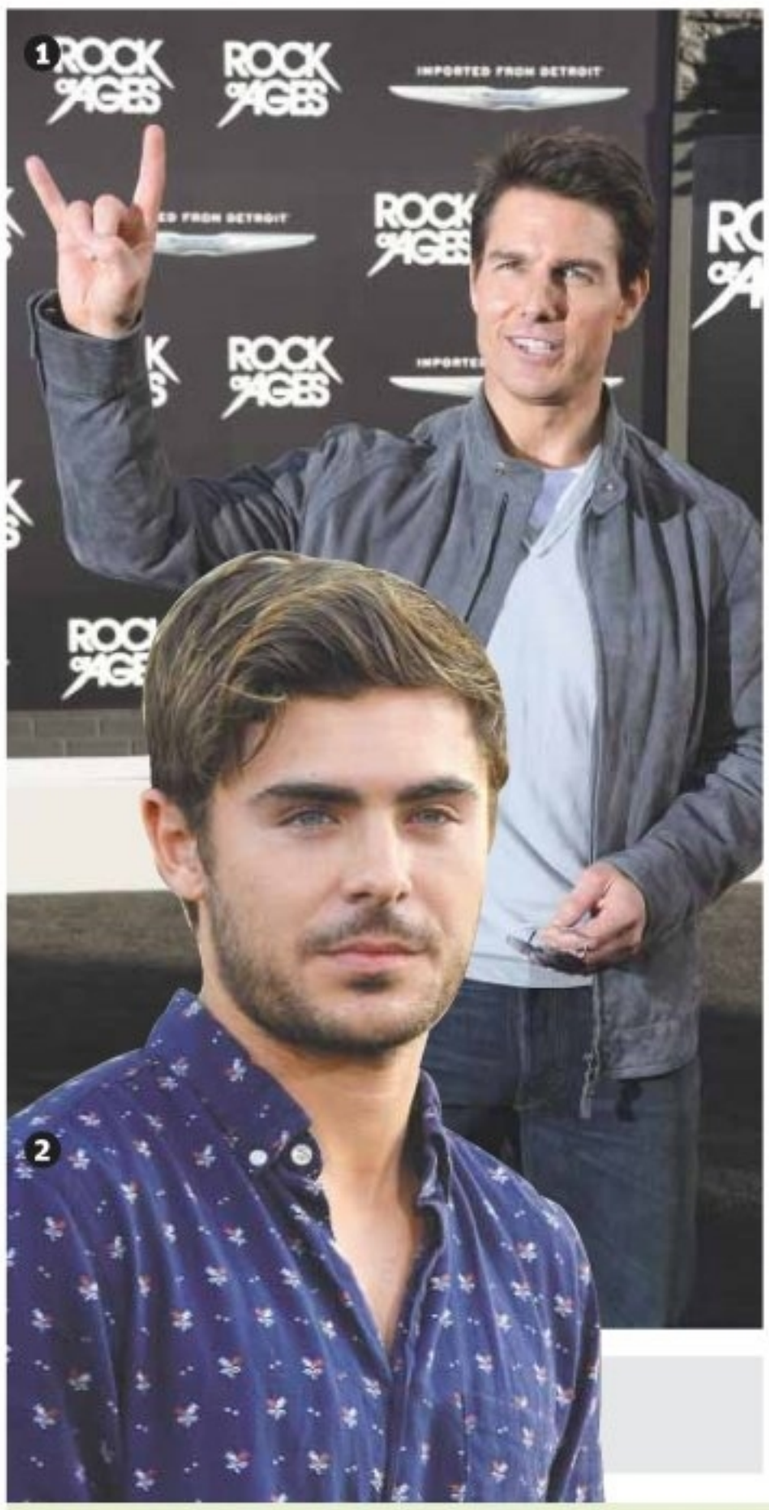
Matthew McConaughey married Camila Alves, his girlfriend of six years and the mother of his two children, in a ceremony at their Texas home over the weekend, according to Us Weekly. The one-of-a-kind ceremony was followed by an all-night party, with guests staying in state-of-the-art tents set up on McConaughey's property. "It's definitely a campground, but they weren't exactly roughing it," the source explains. "They have showers, restrooms and air conditioning. It's very unique, high-end camping."

Jolie to sign on to 'Fifty Shades'?

The breakout erotic novel "Fifty Shades of Grey" may have found yet another fan with Angelina Jolie, who has reportedly been in talks to direct the film adaptation, according to Deadline. Sources say Jolie has had "a conversation or two" with Universal Pictures, the studio that won the rights to the smash book, though a source close to Jolie denies the story.

Baby Fox on the way

Megan Fox is definitely expecting, as she proudly showed off her growing baby bump while strolling around Los Angeles late last week, according to Us Weekly. This would be the first baby for Fox and husband Brian Austin Green, who also has a 9-year-old son from a previous relationship. "I want at least two, probably three," Fox told Cosmopolitan earlier this year when asked about kids.



For those about to rock

1 He's a great actor, but Tom Cruise as Tom Cruise couldn't pull this off at the Friday premiere of his new film, "Rock of Ages."

2 An unbuttoned floral-print and a little scruff: This might be as rock 'n' roll as our boy Zac Efron gets.

3 Pretty boy Josh Duhamel and wife Fergie went in costume — we hope — to the "Rock of Ages" premiere.

4 Now, as for Russell Brand? He woke up in this costume.

5 Snooki's pregnant and The Situation is sober, but some things never change: Pauly D was still sporting his signature Sonic the Hedgehog blowout in Seaside Heights on Saturday.

6 Wayne Coyne of the Flaming Lips went crowd surfing hamster-style during the Park Life Festival in Manchester on Saturday.

'Bunheads'

DRAMA. Amy Sherman-Palladino, creator of "Gilmore Girls," does the small-town quaint 'n' quirky thing again with "Bunheads." Paradise, Calif., is populated with eccentric fast-talkers who are adjusting to the new girl in town — a Vegas showgirl (Sutton Foster) who impulsively marries a guy whose mother runs the local dance studio, where the newbie begins to bond with the young "bunhead" ballerinas. Series premiere, 9 p.m., ABC Family

'bethenny'

TALK. Bethenny Frankel parlays her reality TV fame (infamy?) into a chat show produced by Ellen DeGeneres. "It's what girlfriends talk about to each other, but in hushed tones. Now we're talking about it on air," Frankel told The Associated Press. So, it's exactly like "Real Housewives"? Series premiere, 11 a.m., Fox

Tony Awards don't 'suck so much' for musical 'Once'

The 66th annual Tony Awards began with host Neil Patrick Harris speculating about life as a Broadway show: "What if everyone's diction were crisper, and everyone's secrets were shouted in a stage whisper?" He concluded: "If life were more like theater, life wouldn't suck so much." A big winner early in the night was "Once," which took away wins for Best Orchestration, Best Sound Design of a Musical, Best Book of a Musical and Best Direction of a Musical. Yoga pose of the week

Dolphin pose

▶ Come onto your hands and knees. Set your knees below your hips and your forearms on the floor, with your shoulders directly above your wrists. Press your forearms into the floor.

▶ Curl your toes under, exhale and lift your knees away from the floor. Keep the knees bent and heels lifted away from the floor. Lengthen your tailbone away from the back of your pelvis. Try lifting your sitting bones toward the ceiling.

▶ Carry on pressing the forearms into the floor. Firm your shoulder blades against your back and widen them away from the spine, drawing them toward the tailbone. Hold your head between the upper arms. Do not stop lengthening your tailbone away from the pelvis and lifting the top of your breastbone away from the floor.

▶ Hold for one minute. On an exhale, release your knees to the floor.

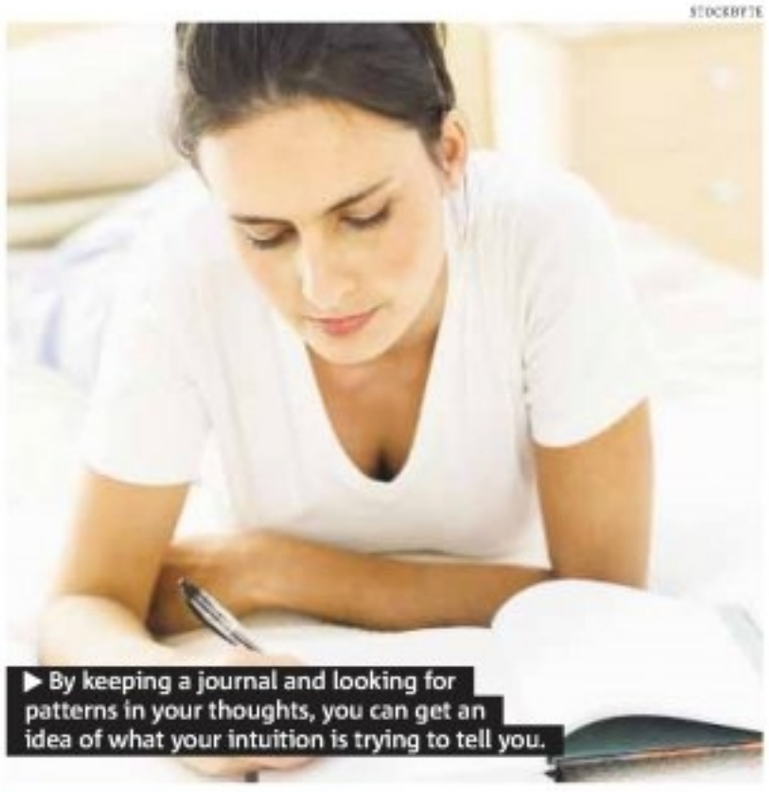
How to trust your intuition

STOCKBYTE



▶ By keeping a journal and looking for patterns in your thoughts, you can get an idea of what your intuition is trying to tell you.

We all have the power of intuition working through us at all times. Our intuition is a kind, loving inner voice that guides us toward positive actions and peaceful outcomes. Often inspiration shows up as a strong gut knowing. Sometimes intuitive guidance comes through as a powerful feeling of inspiration or even a tingly sensation. We all have this inner guidance system, but many of us disconnect from it. If we want to trust our intuition we must release all disbelief and heighten our awareness of our inner voice.

How we block our intuition: The practical world around us doesn't support our creative capacity to connect to our inner guidance system. When we get hooked into our to-do lists and daily duties we lose track of our intuitive flow. Another block is fear. Whenever fear arises we cut off communication to our inner guide. Thoughts like "I can't" or "there's no way" block us from creative ideas and intuitive guidance. Then fear leads us to overthink and start future-tripping negative outcomes. All of these blocks disconnect us from our intuitive guide within.

How to clear the blocks: Releasing these blocks helps us realign with our intuition. We must awaken a practice of tuning in to our inner voice through meditation and stillness. You can begin this practice with two minutes of stillness each morning. Sit comfortably in silence and connect to your breath. Breathe in through your nose and out through your mouth. When two minutes are up take note of whatever your intuition tells you and write it in a notebook. Trust your first instinct. For one week, document the intuition that comes through after your two minutes of stillness. At the end of the week, reread what you've documented. It's likely that you'll see patterns and guidance that may not have come through without this stillness practice. Take this exercise into your day-to-day life: The more you practice listening to your intuition, the more you'll trust its loving guidance.

'Airplane mode' can help keep you grounded

CREATAS IMAGES

▶ Do you control your smartphone, or does your smartphone control you?

Is your smartphone actually making you less productive? Productivity guru Maura Nevel Thomas thinks so Staying focused in a wireless world

Maura Nevel Thomas founded RegainYourTime.com over nine years ago. Her latest book, "Personal Productivity Secrets," is part of Wiley's "Secrets" series. Much of the book is devoted to navigating the pitfalls of wireless distractions.

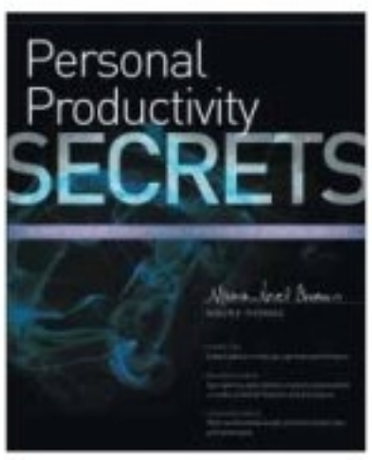
Why is the term "time management" outdated in your view?

Before we had so much technology — and the distractions caused by it — when you devoted your time to something, you could reasonably expect that that was the only task you were going to focus on. But now we all carry the world in our pocket. So it's not a given that just because you devote time to something you will have the experience you intended.

What if we are expected to keep our phones on to run our business — or to keep our job?

▶ Thomas

"If people expect you to respond instantly, it's probably because you set that expectation yourself."
THOMAS



It's interesting that you phrased the question in terms of expectations, because that is what it's about. If people expect you to respond instantly, it's probably because you set that expectation yourself. If you typically respond to your e-mails immediately, then people will come to expect that you will respond to them immediately. So it's a matter of resetting the expectations. There are people whose jobs are about emergency response. Otherwise, being constantly reactive is detrimental to productivity.

Is it just a matter of turning off the phone?

There are many strategies. Really what it's about is making sure you control your technology instead of it controlling you. I know a lot of people who keep their phone on vibrate at all times. While you're valuing the idea of not interrupting someone else, you're still interrupting yourself every hour of the day. Personally, I like 'airplane mode.' You have access to the technology you need, but you're cut off from Internet activity.

DAVID DE LOSSY

▶ Healing hands: Massage therapy is a growing health care profession.

A health care career may be close at hand

With advances in technology and medicine, plus the growth of the elderly population, the health care job market is only as limited as your imagination.

Stephanie Donovan, faculty chair of health programs at Peirce College in Philadelphia, suggests that job seekers go beyond the norm and look into what's known as allied health.

"These roles can be described as the supportive patient services that complement medicine and nursing," she says. "According to the Association of Schools of Allied Health Professionals, some allied health professionals include dental hygienists, diagnostic medical sonographers, dietitians, medical technologists, occupational therapists, physical therapists and respiratory therapists."

Care navigators are people who assist in finding the proper path for aging patients. David Gruber, director of Research of the Healthcare Industry Group at Alvarez & Marsal, explains what that means. "Care navigator is a new position that will become essential to identify 'best in value' providers while facilitating care transitions between primary care physicians and specialists, as well as hospitals and discharge sites of care. They can also facilitate end-of-life care to ensure a high quality experience for all involved."

Massage therapy is another unexpected career that makes the list. "The U.S. Department of Labor has deemed massage a positive outlook profession, with massage being listed as one of the top 50 careers, in terms of expected growth in the U.S. in the coming years," explains Kristien Olson, digital media producer at Pacific College of Oriental Medicine, which offers courses in massage. "Employment of massage therapists is expected to grow by 20 percent from 2010 to 2020, faster than the average for all occupations. Continued growth in the demand for massage services will lead to new openings for massage therapists." ● JULIA WEST

Corporate ransom works to our benefit

RE: "WE MUST PAY THE RICH OR THEY'LL LEAVE US!": It is true we have not much of a choice other than to pay big business and not to mention any of their inappropriate conduct as an example for our young people. Still, this opens the doors for other businesses to compete as well as compensate.
CHARLES POLAND JR., VIA E-MAIL

Party loyalty seems a bit out of whack

RE: "PROUD TO ADVOCATE AGAINST MY INTERESTS": Last Friday Leah Thompson declared loyalty to the GOP, willing to overlook the "few crazies" currently leading the party in favor of its economic message. So Thompson is in favor of lower taxes on the top 0.1 percent, higher taxes on everyone else, an end to the social safety net, and companies free to poison and exploit our children? Strange agenda to support so loyally.
JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA E-MAIL

Gitmo still holds many innocents

Unbelievable! Forty of the people at Guantanamo have been cleared for release since before Obama took office. Meaning they are innocent, of course. Yet after four to eight years they are still being held in prison there! There is no excuse for this in a country that loves justice. CHARLES MICHAEL COUCH, VIA E-MAIL

Liberals want us all in the sweatshops

RE: "TAKING A STAND FOR THE WORKING STIFF": A recent letter writer wants to force right-wing critics of unions to "work in sweatshops 12-16 hours with no A/C or warmth, no health benefits and with no time to be with their loved ones." Apart from the usual desire of lefties like him to force people to do things they would not ordinarily do, what kind of a fool would voluntarily remain in such a work environment? A fool, or maybe someone who would rather have that job than no job at all?
RITCHIE TIEMANN, VIA E-MAIL

Dear president, is economy fine or no?

President Obama made a statement about the economy where he said, "the private sector is doing fine." I was just flabbergasted. The president tried to backtrack at another interview but the damage had already been done. My question is: What country is he living in? The private sector is hurting! Just ask the the 23 million Americans out of work and looking for a job. We now have the longest period of 8-plus percent unemployment since the great depression. The policies of the Obama administration just have not worked, not to mention the national debt is way out of control. Americans need change and not the kind of change that is destroying the American economy. FREDERICK R. BEDELL JR., VIA E-MAIL

Evidently there are some — indeed many — in the private sector who are doing very well. Otherwise, how could all those expensive seats in all those arenas be filled for every big-time baseball, football or basketball game; and, more to the point, how else could Romney be vastly outraising Obama from big donors if that wasn't so?

Horoscope

♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. A disappointing deadlock will result unless a middle ground can be found in an argument you're having with your mate or someone close to you. Compromise is a must in this situation.

♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. Even if you have to work a lot harder for what you want, know that your dedicated efforts won't go unrewarded. It'll all be worth it in the long run.

♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. There's a chance you could display both brilliance and ineptitude when it comes to your financial or commercial affairs. Exactly which one will be the winner is a toss-up.

♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. Even if you have plenty of justification for being angry concerning a past or upcoming incident, remember that you're bigger than anything that transpires. Forgive and forget.

♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Although you're normally a good judge of people, be careful about putting your faith in the wrong folks. Refrain from discussing things that should be kept confidential.

♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. You're apt to be pretty good at achieving your objectives, yet you're not likely to win any popularity contests from some of the tactics you'll use in the process.

♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. There are times when we work very hard to get something we think we want, only to discover later that it wasn't worth the effort. It may be one of those times for you.

♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. In order to be a good salesperson, you'll not only need a good product but an excellent presentation as well. Don't put your prospects to sleep when hawking your wares.

♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. Keep in mind how annoyed you can get when others disrupt your plans, so that you don't do the same to coworkers by trying to rearrange events they have on their calendars.

♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. When it comes to an arrangement where a collective effort is required to carry things off, it might be left up to you to instill the spirit of togetherness in those involved.

Could Hamels be singing the blues?

King Cole still without a contract extension ◗ Poll shows LA as likely suitor ◗ Dodgers players agree

If the Phillies don't sign Cole Hamels to an extension, the buzz around baseball has the Phillies' youngest ace heading to the Los Angeles Dodgers.

An informal poll of MLB insiders by Metro has Hamels in Dodger blue. Seventy percent of the participants believe Hamels will play half of his games next season at Chavez Ravine, if the Phillies fail to give him the money and years he desires.

That's music to the ears of Dodgers ace Clayton Kershaw.

"Yeah, c'mon over," Kershaw said. "If Cole wants to play with us, that would be great. For some people it would be weird since he's played his whole career in Philly but he's from the West Coast. He's a San Diego native."

In an exclusive interview three years ago, Hamels noted that he rooted for the Dodgers over the Padres since the squad had a more enthusiastic fan base. Speaking of strong fan support, Hamels also expressed that he would like to remain in Philly or at least in the Northeastern corridor after his contract expires.

Kershaw believes that the money — and the Dodgers will have plenty to spend — will be the deciding factor.

"I understand what he says about playing in the Northeast," Kershaw said. "The fans in Philly are awesome. It's electric every time we play in Philly. But when you're a free agent, you usually go to who gives you the best contract. Hopefully we can match whatever offer he receives."

That's if the Phils let Hamels get on the open market.

"That's the big issue," Kershaw said. "The ball is in the Phillies court. They have to try and sign him before he hits free agency. If they wait too long to get a deal done and let him become a free agent and lose him, then it's their fault. Once you become a free agent, most of the time the player doesn't come back."

Kershaw is correct. The lone, major free agent to return to his team during the winter was Jimmy Rollins.

"I just don't see the Phillies re-signing Hamels," an NL scout said. "They need to but I don't think they will. I have a feeling he's going to the Dodgers."

Collecting autographs, it's not just for kids anymore

Worley's World

AS TOLD TO ED CONDRAN

A WEEKLY DIARY

Part of the deal for those playing pro baseball, particularly the younger set, is signing autographs. Vance Worley is typically generous with his time when it comes to inking baseballs, gloves and jerseys.

"When I'm at the ballpark, I'm all for signing for anyone," Worley said. "I enjoy it."

Vanimal doesn't just give when it comes to autographs, he receives. When the opposition comes to town, Worley sends a clubhouse attendant to the other team's locker room in search of autographs.

"I just got Josh Johnson and [Giancarlo] Stanton's autographs," Worley said. "I might play but I'm a fan, too. I don't just have players, who play today but I have Hank Aaron. It's pretty cool. I have an easier route than fans do when it comes to getting autographs."

I might play but I'm a fan, too. I have an easier route than fans do when it comes to getting autographs.
VANCE WORLEY

Does Worley, who never witnesses the signatures, ever wonder if another player is pulling a Mickey Mantle. The Mick allegedly had his teammates secretly sign for him.

"I don't think anyone would do that," Worley said. "Would they?"

Doubtful. The irony is that Worley wasn't into autograph collecting when he was growing up in Sacramento, Calif.

"It just wasn't something that I did," Worley said. "I was just into playing and I didn't pay attention to other stuff. I'm making up for it now."

Worley has yet to be asked by an attendant from an opposing clubhouse for his signature.

"I'm fine with that," Worley said. "Maybe that'll happen someday. It's not something I'm thinking about. I'm just focusing on pitching as well as I can and when I have some free time, I'll send some balls over to get signed."

It's a lot easier than what fans go through. After driving out of Citizens Bank Park, a fan surprised Worley by racing three blocks to the light at Darien Street and Pattison Avenue. "Some people will do anything for an autograph," Worley said. "I'm glad I don't have to do that."

Cliff Lee got the start and took a no-decision. The lefty is still winless after allowing four runs on seven hits in six innings.

Devils make it a series, Kings look for one win

Los Angeles drops second straight to Jersey Stanley Cup finals heads back to Hollywood Kings hoping to win first Cup in franchise history

The longer this thing goes, the more the pressure shifts to Los Angeles.

The Kings, who once led the Stanley Cup finals 3-0 over the Devils, have dropped two straight games. The series is 3-2, as the action heads back to Hollywood tonight for Game 6. Only two teams that dug a 3-0 hole in the Cup finals have reached a Game 6. Only one — the 1942 Toronto Maple Leafs — have hoisted the Cup. Adding even more pressure is the fact that Los Angeles has never won the Stanley Cup in the club's 45-year history.

"This is the Stanley Cup final, it isn't supposed to be easy," said former Flyer Justin Williams. "This is a grind. They're a heck of a team over there with a lot of character and a lot of grit."

That grit has some in the New Jersey locker room thinking that a historic comeback is very possible. They believe in themselves. For now, though, the Devils are just taking it one day at a time.

"Guys in here are willing to do whatever it takes to win," rookie Adam Henrique told NHL.com. "We'll head out on the road, and it's a new day. We're alive for another day. Nobody is going to give an inch." METRO
